CARE's WorkLife Solutions (formerly CARE's Employee Assistance) Cultural Diversity in the Classroom Training

Fraser, MI, September 18, 2007

In order to benefit the organization, we must recognize our personal belief system and learn to allow every individual to be unique. Developing effective relationships with our students is a critical factor in our personal successes. Working well with others translates to better interpersonal communication skills. In respecting others in our schools and learning to handle conflict, we can decrease our school-related stress. The skills we utilize to relate within the work environment are also transferable to our personal lives. These trainings are designed to help employees become more successful team players. CARE's WorkLife Solutions offers Professional Development Training in "Cultural Diversity in the Classroom".

This interactive training expands on the:

- Facts about changing workforce & benefits of inclusion
- What diversity is and is not
- Signs of stereotype and prejudice
- Confronting our belief systems & acknowledging our values
- Communication in a diverse workforce
- Cultural differences in communication

It also utilizes group exercises and video to include:

- Definition of Terms
